I do have time next week, let me know what might work best for you. I just knew that Jeff did not want to go forward with the appointments, it was my advice that we do them all, and I did not know that they had been ordered since August. I agree while it may not be pleasant, if we can get through these appointments now, it will help resolve the case.

Michelle, honestly, I do not know what to do about the visitation. Mr. Price has the ability even if he is under a guardianship to decide who he sees. Maybe we can work out some system for Jeff to share information about how their Dad is doing so at least she can feel informed.

Subject: Status of Health Decisions and Family Communication

Dan and Stacey,

I'd like for the three of us to have a call or a meeting or a zoom or something early next week if at all possible.

I'm sending this email for two reasons: first to try to ascertain if Mr. Price is going to his medical appointments and therapy and second to see if we can work together to repair the relationship between Mr. Price and my client.

Last Sunday, Jeff reached out to Terri by text and proposed, "Let's agree on not having any appointments until dad meets with Doctor Shurmoly and then take things from there. We can then work together to schedule any test that he says are needed and get them scheduled at times that are best for dad."

Terri responded by saying while she knows this is all stressful or hard with the court actions (paraphrasing) - all three of these diagnostic tests were ordered in August and have yet to be completed. Dr. Schermoly ordered 2 of the 3 and the neurologist ordered the other. He has already missed two months of potential therapy. These tests need to be done and they need to be done this week and next as currently scheduled.

She then listed out the appointments and said if Jeff was unable to take them, she could or they could make arrangements with his attorney to do otherwise.

Do either of you know if these appointments were all cancelled? He had an appointment Wednesday the 1st - this was to diagnose (or potentially diagnose) Parkinsons. It was a DT scan. There was also a CT scan scheduled because of abdominal pain and an MRI was scheduled due to a concern about potential blood clots in the brain.

** The appointment scheduled with neurologist is Tuesday November 29. Aren't we all in agreement he ought to do this appointment? Should Stacey perhaps call this office and explain this man needs a thorough exam? More than just a checklist for court purposes?

This whole family benefits from Mr. Price being accurately diagnosed as soon as possible, and not just with a one hour exam with Dr. Schomely.

Secondly,

Terri tried to visit this week. Mr. Price said he didn't want to talk to her and didn't want her to visit anymore. He also told her he never wants to see her again.

Terri and I believe he feels this way because he continues to believe she had something to do with the event and incident at Edward Jones and that she stole money from him. She did not.

She has had a consistent relationship with her father her entire life. Until the moment at Edward Jones with Jeff several weeks ago, she was the one taking him to his medical appointments and handling his medications. This has been very hard on her and it sounds like this may be causing a good deal of stress to Mr. Price - unnecessarily. Because the reasons he is angry are untrue. It would be very good if we could all work together to ensure Mr. Price is not angry, riled up or upset and instead all focus on getting him the testing he needs.

If this man has Parkinsons and early dementia, all three of us know there are situations where early treatment and medication can substantially slow the rate of decline. Perhaps that should be our number one priority right now.

Thank you.

Michelle
